Agent is a leader in her field

Local real estate agent Patty McManus' goal is professional excellence. She is extremely responsive to all of her client's needs and wants every one of them to feel like they are her only client, she said.

As a licensed salesperson since 2003 and a licensed real estate broker since 2005, she is an expert negotiator whether she is representing a buyer or a seller. She finds the most rewarding times for her are seeing the look on a new homeowner's face and feeling their excitement and exhilaration in having their dreams realized.

"I am so lucky to be a part of one of the most important life decisions people make," McManus said.

She has expertise in all facets of residential transactions, both as a buyer's and seller's agent and serves the greater Danbury area, including Northern Fairfield and Litchfield counties.

In her spare time, McManus enjoys spending time with her family, all types of arts and crafts and gardening at her home in Brookfield. She has been married to her husband, Michael, since 1989 and has two grown children, Kaitlyn and Ryan.

She takes as many real estate classes as she can, believing that the more knowledge she can gain, the more she can help her clients.

McManus has also received accolades for her performance, having been recognized as a Connecticut Magazine Five Star Profession for the past seven consecutive years.
