Strong relations goes a long way

Local real estate agent Carolyn Sullivan Brodsky has been in the business for seven years; first doing referrals and then, three years ago, as a licensed Realtor.

She recalls that she has always loved real estate, sales, staging and decorating, so it was an easy decision for her to make it a profession.

At first, she just did referrals while she worked for a prominent local plastic surgeon, but when she left that job she jumped right into working for William Pitt Sotheby's International Realty where she has remained since.

Today, she believes in making each of her clients happy while having the best possible experience whether buying or selling.

"I'm dedicated to maintaining exceptional relationships with clients and using a thoughtful approach," the agent added.

"I will go above and beyond and not pass off any of my services to an assistant. I'm there every step of the way."

She serves mostly Norwalk, Westport, Weston, Easton, Southport, Fairfield, Trumbull and Ridgefield — and can refer to other qualified Sotheby's agents if it's an area she doesn't cover.

Brodsky, who enjoys spinning and going to the gym when she's not working, raised her family in Southport for 17 years and moved to Westport half a dozen years ago.

Recently married, she has three children: Max, 24; Austin, 22; and Carly, 18. She also loves traveling is an advocate for rescuing animals instead of buying from a breeder.
