

This week: Homes on islands

1 ► Wailuku, Hawaii The Maui Clifftop House stands 600 feet above the Pacific Ocean. The award-winning three-bedroom home was built in 2006 by architects Tina Gregoric and Aljosa Dekleva of ipe wood, bamboo, concrete, and stucco; its floor-to-ceiling windows look out on the sea and verdant hills. The 2.85-acre property is 30 minutes from town and close to hiking trails and the West Maui Forest Reserve. $3,200,000. Liam Ball, Hawaii Life Real Estate Brokers/Luxury Portfolio Intl., (800) 370-3848

2 ◀ Osprey, Fla. This five-bedroom home on Casey Key is surrounded by palms and mature oaks. The 1937 house features French doors, a brick fireplace, a chef's kitchen, a home theater, a wet bar, and two second-story decks. Outside are 1.2 landscaped acres including a cooking and dining patio; a screened courtyard with a pool and tiled fountain; a one-bedroom guesthouse; a bunkhouse; and a boat house, dock, and private beach. $4,995,000. Tom Hedge Jr., Premier Sotheby's International Realty, (941) 587-6660

3 ► New Rochelle, N.Y. A stone bridge connects the six-bedroom Mediterranean home on private Oak Island with the mainland. Built in 1917, the extensively renovated house has a marble foyer, a dining room with hand-painted wallpaper, a wine room, a master suite with fireplace, and multiple balconies and terraces. The property features stands of oak and a pool and pool house, and includes access to the community beach and marina. $4,900,000. Mimi Magarelli and Lisa Collins, Julia B. Fee/Sotheby's International Realty, (914) 715-3511
